

RIVERSIDE MUSIC

Flute Fingering Chart and Treble Clef Staff

A fingering chart and a treble clef staff. The fingering chart shows a sequence of fingerings: a single circle on the first line, followed by circles on the first, second, and third lines, then a bar with circles on the first, second, and third lines, and finally a bar with circles on the first and second lines. The treble clef staff is empty.

A fingering chart and a treble clef staff. The fingering chart shows a sequence of fingerings: a single circle on the first line, followed by circles on the first, second, and third lines, then a bar with circles on the first, second, and third lines, and finally a bar with circles on the first and second lines. The treble clef staff is empty.

A fingering chart and a treble clef staff. The fingering chart shows a sequence of fingerings: a single circle on the first line, followed by circles on the first, second, and third lines, then a bar with circles on the first, second, and third lines, and finally a bar with circles on the first and second lines. The treble clef staff is empty.

A fingering chart and a treble clef staff. The fingering chart shows a sequence of fingerings: a single circle on the first line, followed by circles on the first, second, and third lines, then a bar with circles on the first, second, and third lines, and finally a bar with circles on the first and second lines. The treble clef staff is empty.

A fingering chart and a treble clef staff. The fingering chart shows a sequence of fingerings: a single circle on the first line, followed by circles on the first, second, and third lines, then a bar with circles on the first, second, and third lines, and finally a bar with circles on the first and second lines. The treble clef staff is empty.

A fingering chart and a treble clef staff. The fingering chart shows a sequence of fingerings: a single circle on the first line, followed by circles on the first, second, and third lines, then a bar with circles on the first, second, and third lines, and finally a bar with circles on the first and second lines. The treble clef staff is empty.